ABSTRACT

A data packet for transmission in a data network having one or more layers. The data packet has a label stack

5   with one or more labels on the basis of which the data packet can be switched in the data network, where each label has a switching significance in one or more of the layers of the data network. The data packet also has at least one layer identifier associated with a label in the 10   label stack.